WABASH, April 27 .- [Special.]-A heavy storm which visited this section last night blew the roof off the Treaty creek stone and lime company's factory, unroofed Lawlon's machine works, blew down the sheds of the Wabash importing company's stables and partially wrecked the quaker church south of the city, unroofing it and carrying the timbers through a brick school house. The accompanying rain caused much loss. Miles of timber in the path of the storm were blown down.

terrific wind storm in the history of Grant county swept through the southeast last night. The path of the storm was almost due east. Around it and about for miles are scattered household utensils, timbers, clothing and everything that a hurricane in its fury fit to give its attention. The house of Thomas Eichelberger furnishes evidence of the most curious of the many freaks that alattend such visitations. The lower half of the house was almost intact, while the upper story was carried a quarter of a mile and dropped into a field. Two boys, thirteen and fifteen years of age, were taken into the embrase of the visitor, and conveyed so quietly into the field that neither of them awoke until the entire outfit went down with a crash, Neither of them was seriously injured. The next point visited was the house of Edgar Gasson, whose wife awoke to find herself clinging to a pump with her family and her domicile scattered about her, the latter in ruins, and the former in discomfiture. Other buildings were shattered, many were unroofed, trees were blown down, roads blocdaded, telephone wires torn down, and general havoc wrought for miles, but no fatalities or serious injuries are reported.

GAS CITY, April 27 .- [Special.]-At 9 o'clock last night a hurricane swept across the country, one mile and a half north of this place, and caused much damage. The roof of the county asylum, a fine, new brick building, was blown off and smaller buildings were wrecked. Several in mates were hurt, though none seriously. An old school house, occupied as a dwelling, was blown to pieces, the occupants escaping seemingly by a miracle. The roof was blown from the two-story residence of Jesse Jay and landed in the river, and a chimney fell across a bed a second after his little daughter was lifted out, A young woman in the family was bruised by bricks falling upon her. All along the path of the storm barns, out-houses, orchards and timber were leveled. The damage will amount to several thousand dollars.

WARSAW, April 27. - [Special.]-Last evening a terrific storm swept over this place, doing much damage in the southern part of the city. Barns were unroofed, out-buildings were blown away, fences were carried away and trees were uprooted. The damage amounts to several hundred dollars. The greatest damage and Mrs. Parks. The house belonging to Mrs. Parks barely escaped being crushed | Mathena cried: by the fall of an immense pine tree.

FORTVILLE, April 27 .- [Special.]-The heavy rains and wind of the past few days have done considerable damage to buildings, trees and growing crops, and especially to A. W. Clayton, who is building a business house here. Luckily the workmen had but a few brick laid when the heavy rains undermined the south wall of the foundation and about fifty feet crushed into the celiar, entailing a loss MUNCIE, April 27 .- [Special.] -- Mordecai Whitney's new two-story brick residence, five miles east of Muncie, was unroofed and the walls partially destroyed by a severe wind storm last night. His orchard, with many others, was destroyed, and also much timber.

SWEPT BY STORMS.

Houses Unroofed and Other Damage in Eastern Indiana.

RICHMOND, April 30. - [Special.]-A terrific gale swept this section yesterday. The evening had been Aprilish, with dashes of rain, clear skies, moonlight and gloom rapidly alternating. Earlier in the evening a cloud with rain, lightning and thunder had passed over from the southwest to the northeast. Then the wind shifted and it drifted back to the westward; another cloud from the west was coming; the two met and seemed to combat like contending armies.

The flashes of lightning and the discharge of thunder made the earth tremble. A vortex formed and swept down toward the earth in a great funnel of seething cloud. The forests were swept before it in a strip a mile wide, but the chief force of the wind was in a space not more than a quarter of that width. The west end of one school building was torn to pieces and the whole house unroofed. Mrs. Sallie White's house and Jerre Baker's residence were unroofed and badly damaged; Benjamin Dugdale's barn was dismantled and partially wrecked: small out-houses were turned over or torn to pieces, nearly every house was partially unroofed or damaged in some way; many windows were crushed in and the sashes torn out: lences were thrown down and the rails scattered. A vast volume of water fell and the country is flooded. The people were greatly frightened and some of them were nervously prostrated in consequence. At Fountaine City the rainfall was equally heavy, but the wind was lighter. Three miles north of Fountaine City, however, the wind tore up trees and leveled fences, besides blowing off the gable and roof of the Hopewell school house, A perfect deluge of rain fell to the north-

A CRAWFORD CALF.

The Monstrosity That Is Attracting Some

Attention at Eckerty. ECKERTY, April 30 .- [Special.]-Of the monstrosities which have recently been recorded, Crawford county must stand well to the foreground. One was born last Friday night of a three-year-old heifer -her first production.

The curious story had gone abroad, but unwilling to believe it, THE SENTINEL COTrespondent waited till Mr. Lesson, the owner, invited him to witness the monstrosity. The calf, or what the owner chooses to call it, is almost human from the loins forward, including tolerable shapely hands and fairly interesting countenance, but from the loins backward the creature is a perfect bovine. Though more than two days old now, it will weigh perhaps sixty pounds. Owing to its peculiar shape it has failed to stand, and its awkward attempts to sit are an utter failure. Ideas have been given by physicians why monstrosities are born of the human family, but what explanation can be given for such a monstrosity as this among the lower animals?

He went to Tecumseh, Mich., early in life and soon made several thousand dallars in a general store dealing in furs, He went from there to Louisville, Ky., where he made nearly $100,000 swapping negroes and pedding milk. All the stock, most of the negroes and two of Mr. Snells' children were drowned. He escaped with his wife and two children, T. B. Snell of Muncie and T. R. Snell of Cincinnati on a large cake of ice. He then went to Lasell, Ill., and his wife died with cholera. Mr. Snell next joined the rush for the California gold field, and he soon returned with another fortune. Result of a Charivari. HUNTINGTON, April 30.-[Special,]-A serious incident happened Friday night at Ossian, about 10 o'clock, and was the result of a "belling" that was being carried on at the presbyterian parsonage. About o'clock Robert Hatfield and Miss May Milliken went to the parsonage to be joined in matrimony. The Rev. Mr. Craven happened to be away from home, so they awaited his arrival on the 10 o'clock train from Kingsland, where he was holding a meeting. A number of boys of the town concluded that it would be a nice thing to give the couple a "belling," and, not waiting until the ceremony was completed, proceeded to the residence and set up the din. When the minister arrived the boys continued the racket, and, it is said, did so during the ceremony so that the words could scarcely be heard either by guests or the minister himself. Completing his duties, the Rev. Mr. Craven determined to rout them, and, seeing a pan of scalding hot water on the stove, picked it up and walked to the door to throw it over them, as he says. On the porch near the door was Gene Tisron, beating a bass drum, and when the door opened he turned his face in that direction to see who was coming. Mr. Craven, as soon as he opened the door, dashed the water and let it go | watched them and heard suspicous noises straight into the eyes of young Tisron. His eyes and face were frightfully scalded. Mr. Payne stated that the shooting was a mystery to him, as he did not see how any one could have got into and out of the house without being heard, and in reply to a question Mrs.

Payne said there was no pistol in the house. Mrs. Payne asked me if I thought Mr. Payne's wound was fatal; if I thought the act would be repeated, and how I accounted for the watch being found in the bed covering. I told her I did not know. The witness testified to being alone with Mrs. Payne in her bed-room at the Tremont house in 1887, and to having seen other men go to her room in 1887-8. Mrs. Payne said to witness several times that she did not love her husband as she should. Ella Foster, who worked for McCormick where Brake boarded in 1892, testified to seeing Mrs Payne go up stairs towards Brake's room.
